The University of Virginia and Washington and Lee will take part in the seventh annual indoor track meet of the George Washington University, to be held at Convention Hall February 13.
Official announcement to this effect teams to participate in the affair. The men will enter most of the regular events and will take part in several of the relays now being arranged. Prof. McNemar expects additional in-titutions to which invitations have been ent will be heard from today. It is believed that acceptances will come in with a rush before the end of the week. The George Washington track candidates still are training daily under the personal supervision of Ceach "Boh" Fleming. The men are getting in ex-cellent shape and are developing re-

Details of the meet are being handled by Peof. McNemar, assisted by Coach Fleming and Howard W. Hodgkins. graduate adviser on track athletics. Homer T. Shaver, captain of the George Washington University basket-ball team, thinks Virginia has one of the best basket-ball fives in its his-

Agents Are Looking Over Circuits in New England, the South and Middle West.

M'KINNON ON THE JOB

Minor leagues in New England, the South and Middle West as allies, are promised the Federals by official agents of the independents and volunteers who have been active during the past week. According to an announcement made yesterday in the Eastern office of the Federal League, one of the results of the activity in the minor field may be the establishment of a new circuit in New England League and Eastern Associa-tion, furnishing opposition in the larger cities of the existing circuit.

Hugh A. McKinnon, a Federal League representative, who has been at work in several of the strongholds of the Eastern Association, is now studying condi-tions in the cities of bynn, Lowell, Law-rence, and Worcester, Mass., and Manchester, N. H .- cities which have at some time or at present are enlisted in the New England League. It has long been the idea of baseball fans in Hartford, Springfield, New Haven, and Bridgeport, of the Eastern Association, that the Eastern Association or the original Connecticut League did not provide a setting in keep ing with the ambitions and resources of the thriving cities. To Invade New England.

The same conditions have prevalled it the New England League. Worcester, largest city in the circuit, is the third-largest in New England, being surpassed in population only by Boston and Provi-dence. In the old Eastern League that preceded the International, Worce ter was paired with Providence at the north-east end of the circuit. Worcester was once a stronghold of the National League and contributed to history Lee Richmond, a sensational lefthand pitcher from Brown University, who was among the first to get into the record books for a no-hit performance.

Hartford was enrolled as a charter member of the National League city. and before being coaxed into class b surroundings had a fling in the Eastern League. Because of the excellent railroad facilities it would be possible to get eight of the best cities in New Eng-land grouped for practical results. In-stead of being held back by large ex-penditures in traveling, the promoters could provide baseball of a grade sevreal degrees faster than any of the cities has experienced since its "Big Time" in the national sport under prom-
